Pin-Up Girl Recalls Old Days

SEQUIM, Wash. (AP) — She was the Navy's first pin-up girl, a lass of 20, who in 1917 donned a blue jacket and jaunty sailor's cap to pose for a win-some recruiting poster.

"Gee!! I Wish I Were a Man. I'd Join the Navy," read the poster, and thousands of young men responded.

Ten days after she posed, Bernice Smith joined the Navy herself, keeping alive the unbroken string of wars — starting with the Revolutionary War — in which members of her family had served. Others have since served through Vietnam.

"Things have changed so much now," said Bernice Tongate, now a widow, as she looked forward to Independence Day.

"Things don't mean what they used to. I think our country is the only one I'd like to live in, but we make mistakes. None of us is perfect.

"If you don't make mistakes, then you're six feet under and pushing up the daisies," she said in an interview Friday.

But in 1917, her only thoughts were of helping the country defend itself in a foreign war. The historic recruiting poster is her pride.

"I would have liked it better if (the artist) had put that cap on my head in a different manner," said Mrs. Tongate, 80, of the drawing by Howard Chandler Christy.

"That certainly was not regulation. I wouldn't have worn it to the office like that, I'll tell you."

Mrs. Tongate was a Los Angeles office worker riding to work on a streetcar when she read in a newspaper about the Navy's recruiting women.

She rushed to the nearest recruiting office. Presenting the newspaper, she demanded enlistment.

Recruiters went to their commanding officer, paper in hand. Mrs. Tongate followed behind a civilian, Christy, who was in the office.

"Captain, there's a girl here who wants to join the Navy. If you will get a hat, blouse and a pair of pants, I'll make a poster that will turn this town upside down," Christy told the officer.

"If I was a man, I would join the Navy," Mrs. Tongate remembers telling the men. "This is the first time our family has never been represented in a war, and you've just got to take me."

"I was a nervy little brat," she added.

The poster was drawn the same day and Bernice Smith soon afterwards became the first woman in California to enlist. She served until May 1920, earning chief petty officer's stripes as a yeoman.

Rejected by the Navy and Marines for service during World War II — "They said I was too old" — Mrs. Tongate joined the Army, serving in military postal facilities at Battle Creek, Mich., and Riverside, Calif.

Two grandsons served in Vietnam, one in the Army and one in the Navy.

Storms Dot Wide Areas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Isolated thunderstorms dotted the north and central Rockies, the western south and central Plains, the south Atlantic Coast states and extreme northeastern New York early today.

But severe thunderstorms over North Carolina and Georgia diminished last night, although a special marine warning was posted for Pamlico Sound in eastern North Carolina for winds that could be swifter than 55 m.p.h.

Thunderstorm activity also diminished in southwest Texas and west central Nevada.

Early morning temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. (EDT) ranged from 46 degrees at Sault Sainte Marie, Mich., to 96 at Needles, Calif.

Honolulu tied both a record high and record low for July 1 when the temperature rose to 89 degrees after dipping to a low of 69 degrees.

Weather

A passing high pressure system will keep sunshine and dry weather in Pickaway County through Monday. Skies will be mostly sunny today, Sunday, and Monday with highs near 90 and a low tonight near 60. There is little chance of rain until Tuesday, when daytime showers will bring cooler weather to the county. The high Friday was 81 and the low was 67.

Court Ponders Voter Suits

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's Supreme Court has taken under consideration a pair of cases which could determine the fate of the state's new election day voter registration law.

In one case, a group called Ohioans for Preservation of Honest Elections asked the court Friday to force Democratic Atty. Gen. William J. Brown to certify their petition summaries so it can proceed with a drive to repeal the law on the November ballot. Brown last week ruled that the summaries were defective.

In the other case, majority Democratic leaders in the legislature requested the court, controlled 4-3 by Democrats, to force GOP Secretary of State Ted W. Brown to put the law into effect immediately.

Brown assigned a 90-day effective date, which put it in late August, after giving immediate effect to an appropriations section of the same legislation. Appropriations bills take immediate effect, but the secretary said that particular part of the act was separable from four other sections providing instant registration and a number of statute changes making it easier for Ohioans to register and vote.

Appropriations bills are not subject to a voter referendum, a point stressed before the court by Columbus attorney David Young, who represented House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, and Senate Majority Leader Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron.

However, another Columbus lawyer, William L. Schmidt, counsel for the secretary of state, said his client was within his legal authority in dividing the bill.

Both attorneys cited earlier Supreme Court decisions to boost their own cases, but claimed cases cited by their opponents were not applicable to the current litigation.

Young told the court that "very simply, the question before this court is, 'does the secretary of state have the right to block the effective date of legislation enacted by the General Assembly of the State Of Ohio?'"

Schmidt told the court a decision holding that the substantive part of the bill was not subject to a referendum would deprive the people of their constitutional rights.

The constitution, he added, gives the legislature the power to enact laws but "makes it clear that the people have reserved the right of referendum."

In the petition case, Robert E. Leach, counsel for Jean Barren of Steubenville, Jefferson County GOP election board member, and others, argued that Atty. Gen. Brown had no right to reject petition summaries, and in arbitrarily doing so has already "cost us nine days" of the petition drive.

Some justices said they agreed that the attorney general, a Democrat, might have exceeded his authority in deciding, on his own, that the law is an appropriations measure not subject to referendum.

"I do not believe the attorney general had the right to make that determination," said Justice Frank D. Celebrezze.

The court did not indicate when it would rule, but indicated it would move quickly in the petition case.

Girl Scout, Parents In Seclusion

SARASOTA, Fla. — Charlotte Grosse, 15, who was dragged screaming from a Girl Scout tent, has left town with her parents after escaping from a man she says bound and sexually abused her during the 52 hours he held her captive.

"They need to get their lives back together," a detective from the Sarasota County Sheriff's office said Friday, declining to release details of the family's whereabouts.

A bond hearing was set today for Wilfred "Rusty" Bannister, 33, who is being held on state kidnapping and involuntary sexual battery charges in the Wednesday morning abduction.

Bannister, a former Alaskan pipeline worker, is accused of dragging Charlotte by the hair away from a Girl Scout campsite in a remote state park.

Charlotte was reunited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grosse of Nokomis, Friday morning after she escaped from Bannister's $61,000 island home on Siesta Key.

The teen-ager apparently had been held at the two-story house since Wednesday. She left the house only twice, police said, both times accompanied by Bannister.

Her captor permitted her to call her parents Wednesday night from a public phone booth in Bradenton. Later, a detective said, Bannister drove Charlotte to a cow pasture where he apparently talked about taking her to another state to live.

A spokesman said Bannister wanted the girl to trust him and not run away.

Early Friday, Charlotte, who had been bound naked to a bed, was able to free herself while Bannister was out getting gasoline for his sports car, police said.

They said she called her father who instructed her to grab something to wear and get out of the house. Police, who monitored the call, said she gave her father the address of Bannister's home.

Charlotte fled through a window and ran next door to the home of Julie Rosell, who said later the girl told her that she had been sexually abused, beaten and tied to the shower. The Grosses were called again.

"I gave her water, clothes and a hug," said Mrs. Rosell. She said Charlotte was wearing only a T-shirt when she came screaming through her kitchen door shouting, "I need a telephone, I've been kidnaped."

Postal Rate Hike Planned Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service still plans to raise rates next year, even though it's in its best financial shape ever.

Next week, the Postal Service board of governors is expected to propose increasing the first-class letter rate from 13 cents to 15 or 16 cents early in 1978.

The agency, while making "real progress," still lost $50 million in the last 12 months, says Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar.

Bailar said Friday that the operating loss was drastically lower than the previous year's record $1.2 billion and below the Postal Service's $500 million average annual deficit.

The postmaster general said the agency's financial condition is better than at any time since the 1971 reorganization made it substantially independent of Congress and the president.

But he added that because "inflation continues to plague the Postal Service," steps must be taken soon to increase rates next year.

Bailar said the agency, under existing labor agreements, must soon pay raises to most of its workers. And other cost increases, such as for fuel, are inevitable, he said.

Last year Bailar testified before a Senate committee that the Postal Service was in such financial peril that it could become insolvent within a year.

He said that when the new rates take effect early next year, over two years will have passed since the last increase in first-class rates.

Postage increases, once proposed by the board of governors, need be approved only by the Postal Rate Commission.

At one time officials had expected to lose about $1 billion in the year ended June 30.

The financial picture improved after Bailar ordered that many job vacancies be filled by transferring workers not needed in their present posts, rather than by hiring new employees. This policy, which has sparked controversy with the postal unions, has reduced the work force to 657,000 people, some 84,000 less than before the 1971 reorganization.

The postmaster general contended this reduction has not hurt service, a view disputed by the unions, many congressmen and others.

Bailar said Postal Service statistics show that on-time delivery was as frequent in the last 12 months as at any time during the six years.

"The Postal Service delivered 96 per cent of mail eligible for overnight delivery on time and 94 per cent of mail designated for second- and third-day delivery," he said.

A Little Bit About Prescription Drugs

EDITORS NOTE: This is the third of a series of six articles on drugs to be printed Saturdays in The Herald. On July 30 a number of essay questions to which boys and girls from the ages of 10 to 16 can respond will be printed. Winners will be chosen from each age group and will be taken to an expenses paid trip to a Cincinnati Reds baseball game.

Since there are literally thousands of drugs on the market that can be obtained by a prescription it would be impossible to even mention all of them in the space provided. For that reason this article will deal mainly with that type of prescription drug which out-sells all the others. I am speaking of a class of drugs called psychotherapeutic drugs, which are used basically to relieve anxiety and depression. They include barbiturates, sedatives, tranquilizers, amphetamines, and stimulants just to mention a few.

Keep in mind that these drugs do not fight infection, are not used for inoculation against disease, and in fact do not "cure" anything. They are sort of psychological pain relievers.

In the last article, you might remember, it was said that pain is a warning system built into the body to alert us that something is wrong and that we should take some time to find out why.

This is also true of psychological pain, (anxiety, depression, etc.). These pains tell us that something is going wrong in our lives and that perhaps it is time we do something about it. If a person is taking handfuls of a tranquilizer to relieve anxiety, but doing nothing to find out what is causing that anxiety, then that is sort of like having your hand in the middle of a fire and instead of removing it, taking a mouthful of pain killers so that it won't hurt.

I am not saying that these drugs are useless in helping people deal with their problems. That would be unfair. But it is true that too often people take these psychotherapeutic drugs simply to relieve their anxiety or depression, and spend little or no time finding out why they are anxious or depressed.

Think about this. Last year Americans took three billion Valium, (a tranquilizer), which makes it the number one selling drug in the country, and that Librium, another tranquilizer, was the number three selling prescription drug.

It would appear as if the number one disease in America is anxiety, if it weren't for the fact that anxiety isn't even a disease. Anxiety is simply one of the ways we tell ourselves we are not very happy. So if we keep taking drugs to get rid of the anxiety, all we are really doing is refusing to listen to ourselves. It is very hard to be happy without listening to ourselves.

Take the time to listen to yourself. You'll be a lot happier in the long run, that is unless you'd rather be numb.

Here are some of the things you should remember any time you get a prescription from your doctor. Make sure you understand the directions clearly, and follow them carefully. Ask if there are any side effects that you should watch for. Also make sure and tell your doctor any other medication you might be taking at the time.

Ask your pharmacist to put your prescription in a bottle with a safety cap, and even then keep it out of the reach of little ones.

Don't keep old pills lying around. If you are through with them throw them out. Some pills become dangerous if they get too old. Look for an expiration date on the bottle. Don't play doctor by giving your pills to friends because it sounds as if they have what you had. It's not only against the law, it is very dangerous. Let a real doctor make that decision for your friend.

Clean out your medicine cabinet regularly.

Stay happy-Stay healthy.

Court Ponders Voter Suits

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's Supreme Court has taken under consideration a pair of cases which could determine the fate of the state's new election day voter registration law.

In one case, a group called Ohioans for Preservation of Honest Elections asked the court Friday to force Democratic Atty. Gen. William J. Brown to certify their petition summaries so it can proceed with a drive to repeal the law on the November ballot. Brown last week ruled that the summaries were defective.

In the other case, majority Democratic leaders in the legislature requested the court, controlled 4-3 by Democrats, to force GOP Secretary of State Ted W. Brown to put the law into effect immediately.

Brown assigned a 90-day effective date, which put it in late August, after giving immediate effect to an appropriations section of the same legislation. Appropriations bills take immediate effect, but the secretary said that particular part of the act was separable from four other sections providing instant registration and a number of statute changes making it easier for Ohioans to register and vote.

Appropriations bills are not subject to a voter referendum, a point stressed before the court by Columbus attorney David Young, who represented House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, and Senate Majority Leader Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron.

However, another Columbus lawyer, William L. Schmidt, counsel for the secretary of state, said his client was within his legal authority in dividing the bill.

Both attorneys cited earlier Supreme Court decisions to boost their own cases, but claimed cases cited by their opponents were not applicable to the current litigation.

Young told the court that "very simply, the question before this court is, 'does the secretary of state have the right to block the effective date of legislation enacted by the General Assembly of the State Of Ohio?'"

Schmidt told the court a decision holding that the substantive part of the bill was not subject to a referendum would deprive the people of their constitutional rights.

The constitution, he added, gives the legislature the power to enact laws but "makes it clear that the people have reserved the right of referendum."

In the petition case, Robert E. Leach, counsel for Jean Barren of Steubenville, Jefferson County GOP election board member, and others, argued that Atty. Gen. Brown had no right to reject petition summaries, and in arbitrarily doing so has already "cost us nine days" of the petition drive.

Some justices said they agreed that the attorney general, a Democrat, might have exceeded his authority in deciding, on his own, that the law is an appropriations measure not subject to referendum.

"I do not believe the attorney general had the right to make that determination," said Justice Frank D. Celebrezze.

The court did not indicate when it would rule, but indicated it would move quickly in the petition case.

Girl Scout, Parents In Seclusion

SARASOTA, Fla. — Charlotte Grosse, 15, who was dragged screaming from a Girl Scout tent, has left town with her parents after escaping from a man she says bound and sexually abused her during the 52 hours he held her captive.

"They need to get their lives back together," a detective from the Sarasota County Sheriff's office said Friday, declining to release details of the family's whereabouts.

A bond hearing was set today for Wilfred "Rusty" Bannister, 33, who is being held on state kidnapping and involuntary sexual battery charges in the Wednesday morning abduction.

Bannister, a former Alaskan pipeline worker, is accused of dragging Charlotte by the hair away from a Girl Scout campsite in a remote state park.

Charlotte was reunited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grosse of Nokomis, Friday morning after she escaped from Bannister's $61,000 island home on Siesta Key.

The teen-ager apparently had been held at the two-story house since Wednesday. She left the house only twice, police said, both times accompanied by Bannister.

Her captor permitted her to call her parents Wednesday night from a public phone booth in Bradenton. Later, a detective said, Bannister drove Charlotte to a cow pasture where he apparently talked about taking her to another state to live.

A spokesman said Bannister wanted the girl to trust him and not run away.

Early Friday, Charlotte, who had been bound naked to a bed, was able to free herself while Bannister was out getting gasoline for his sports car, police said.

They said she called her father who instructed her to grab something to wear and get out of the house. Police, who monitored the call, said she gave her father the address of Bannister's home.

Charlotte fled through a window and ran next door to the home of Julie Rosell, who said later the girl told her that she had been sexually abused, beaten and tied to the shower. The Grosses were called again.

"I gave her water, clothes and a hug," said Mrs. Rosell. She said Charlotte was wearing only a T-shirt when she came screaming through her kitchen door shouting, "I need a telephone, I've been kidnapped."

Postal Rate Hike Planned Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service still plans to raise rates next year, even though it's in its best financial shape ever.

Next week, the Postal Service board of governors is expected to propose increasing the first-class letter rate from 13 cents to 15 or 16 cents early in 1978.

The agency, while making "real progress," still lost $50 million in the last 12 months, says Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar.

Bailar said Friday that the operating loss was drastically lower than the previous year's record $1.2 billion and below the Postal Service's $500 million average annual deficit.

The postmaster general said the agency's financial condition is better than at any time since the 1971 reorganization made it substantially independent of Congress and the president.

But he added that because "inflation continues to plague the Postal Service," steps must be taken soon to increase rates next year.

Bailar said the agency, under existing labor agreements, must soon pay raises to most of its workers. And other cost increases, such as for fuel, are inevitable, he said.

Last year Bailar testified before a Senate committee that the Postal Service was in such financial peril that it could become insolvent within a year.

He said that when the new rates take effect early next year, over two years will have passed since the last increase in first-class rates.

Postage increases, once proposed by the board of governors, need be approved only by the Postal Rate Commission.

At one time officials had expected to lose about $1 billion in the year ended June 30.

The financial picture improved after Bailar ordered that many job vacancies be filled by transferring workers not needed in their present posts, rather than by hiring new employees. This policy, which has sparked controversy with the postal unions, has reduced the work force to 657,000 people, some 84,000 less than before the 1971 reorganization.

The postmaster general contended this reduction has not hurt service, a view disputed by the unions, many congressmen and others.

Bailar said Postal Service statistics show that on-time delivery was as frequent in the last 12 months as at any time during the six years.

"The Postal Service delivered 96 per cent of mail eligible for overnight delivery on time and 94 per cent of mail designated for second-and third-day delivery," he said.

Ohio Starts Year In Black

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Budget and Management Director William W. Wilkins said Friday that Ohio started its new fiscal year $13.1 million in the black.
Because of the small cushion, Wilkins said Gov. James A. Rhodes' spending cuts—which he claimed saved $130 million—were justified.
In signing the new budget, Rhodes indicated he was satisfied that the legislature had presented him with a balanced spending plan. Consequently, he is not expected to impose restraints, similar to the 2 per cent cut he ordered two years ago.
Wilkins, the governor's chief fiscal officer, said the state government balance sheet showed $100.6 million in assets as the fiscal year closed, and $87.5 million in outstanding bills.
"As recently as a month ago, there was some cause for concern," he said, "but corporate taxes and auto sales tax returns remained strong and our agency managers kept their belts tightened."
Rhodes signed the new two-year general appropriations bill into law late Thursday. It totals about $13 billion for the 1977-79 fiscal period.

Ohio Starts Year In Black

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Budget and Management Director William W. Wilkins said Friday that Ohio started its new fiscal year $13.1 million in the black.

Because of the small cushion, Wilkins said Gov. James A. Rhodes' spending cuts—which he claimed saved $130 million—were justified.

In signing the new budget, Rhodes indicated he was satisfied that the legislature had presented him with a balanced spending plan. Consequently, he is not expected to impose restraints, similar to the 2 per cent cut he ordered two years ago.

Wilkins, the governor's chief fiscal officer, said the state government balance sheet showed $100.6 million in assets as the fiscal year closed, and $87.5 million in outstanding bills.

"As recently as a month ago, there was some cause for concern," he said, "but corporate taxes and auto sales tax returns remained strong and our agency managers kept their belts tightened."

Rhodes signed the new two-year general appropriations bill into law late Thursday. It totals about $13 billion for the 1977-79 fiscal period.

Man Faces New Charge

Larry Devon Workman, the Columbus man who failed to appear to begin serving a prison sentence, will face another trial on a charge of failure to appear.

However, he will be tried on the charge after he serves three concurrent six month to five year terms in the Ohio Penitentiary.

Workman, April 6, was given the sentence by Pickaway County Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer for passing bad checks, breaking and entering, and grand theft.

Judge Ammer allowed Workman one month to take care of business matters. But when he failed to appear, a warrant was issued on the new charge.

Workman was indicted June 17 on the failure to appear charge and pleaded not guilty.

Judge Ammer denied shock probation for Dale L. Troxler, Columbus, who pleaded guilty to charges of grand theft and carrying a concealed and loaded firearm April 30.

Troxler is currently serving concurrent six month to five year and one to 10 year terms in the Ohio Penitentiary on the charges.

In denying shock probation, Judge Ammer noted that Troxler had a past criminal record and pointed out that he was not eligible for parole because of the firearm charge.

Man Faces New Charge

Larry Devon Workman, the Columbus man who failed to appear to begin serving a prison sentence, will face another trial on a charge of failure to appear.

However, he will be tried on the charge after he serves three concurrent six month to five year terms in the Ohio Penitentiary.

Workman, April 6, was given the sentence by Pickaway County Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer for passing bad checks, breaking and entering, and grand theft.

Judge Ammer allowed Workman one month to take care of business matters. But when he failed to appear, a warrant was issued on the new charge.

Workman was indicted June 17 on the failure to appear charge and pleaded not guilty.

Judge Ammer denied shock probation for Dale L. Troxler, Columbus, who pleaded guilty to charges of grand theft and carrying a concealed and loaded firearm April 30.

Troxler is currently serving concurrent six month to five year and one to 10 year terms in the Ohio Penitentiary on the charges.

In denying shock probation, Judge Ammer noted that Troxler had a past criminal record and pointed out that he was not eligible for parole because of the firearm charge.

Gas Reserves Down

Considering the prolonged severity of last winter's cold weather, the natural gas shortage which developed, while troublesome to factory and home alike, turned out to be not as bad as some had predicted.

This coming winter those shortages could be a good bit worse, if weather conditions make a repeat performance. Even with a more normal winter, shortages are almost certain to occur. That is the word from the gas companies as reported to the Federal Power Commission.

Reserves were depleted during the winter months and are not expected to be sufficiently replenished to withstand a heavy drain. Now is a good time for those who can reasonably convert to coal or oil to consider doing so. The alternative could be more factory shutdowns when cold weather returns.

You're Killing Your Feet

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

This lament, or a verbal variation thereof, is moaned thousands of times a day in every city in America. You hear it in the country too, but less frequently.

"But the truth is," says podiatrist Dr. Elizabeth Roberts, "that your feet aren't killing you. It is you who are killing your feet."

And your weapons are provided by the shoe manufacturers, who know a whole lot more about fashion than about physiognomy.

"The anatomy of the foot and the economics of shoe manufacturing are constantly at odds," Dr. Roberts claims. "If the heel of a shoe fits your foot's heel, then the rest of the shoe is almost always too narrow for your toes.

"There are seasonal changes in shoe styles, which means money for the shoe people — but your feet don't change with the seasons, which can mean discomfort not only for your feet but for your legs. Whenever a woman switches over from high heels in winter to low or flat heels in summer, for instance, there's a terrific pull on the muscles of the back of the leg, which have been actually shortened by the heel experience. Some people even suffer a ruptured tendon that way."

Anyone with ouchy feet — and that includes almost every man and woman in the world who decides to give up going barefoot — will get a boot (ap-sychological variety, not leather) out of talking to Dr. Roberts. She knows everything about what goes on below the ankle, and is out to eradicate the corns and calluses, not to mention the athlete's foot, of America, with solid information.

Example: "High heels were not really meant for the anatomy of human beings, and now even men wear them. In fact, the U.S. male equals the American woman in foot-wear mistakes."

"Men wear an awful lot of unnecessary shoe. All that sturdy, confining leather is terrible for feet. I'd like to see them all switch to sneakers. Everyone should wear as little shoe as possible. The less 'shoe' you wear, the better your feet will be. "And if you can go barefoot, that's bliss. A beachcomber has the perfect functional feet."

The basic problem, says Dr. Roberts, is that shoes come in pairs. But feet do not. One foot is always larger than the other foot.

Another basic problem is that shoes remain the same size — but feet change. "Your feet are always larger in the afternoon than in the morning, even when the weather is cool. This is why, in shopping for shoes, I feel that you should always go to a shoe store after you have been on your feet for a few hours — at which time, they will be expanded."

"Then, in buying shoes, have it written on your sales slip that the shoes may be returned and your money refunded if they turn out to be uncomfortable. Any reputable store should give you this guarantee. One should never have to 'break in' shoes."

When you get the new purchase home, wear them around the house for two hours. "Of course, remember that the shoes must be kept clean — in case. So wear a large pair of socks or fabric shoe bags around the new shoes while you're testing them."

Dr. Roberts, who practices podiatry in midtown Manhattan (an appointment sometimes takes weeks), has written a book now out in paperback titled "On Your Feet," in which she goes into great detail on every aspect of foot care and how to select shoes. But she talks even more firmly than she writes:

"In being fitted for shoes, remember that the salesman doesn't know your feet as well as you do. Stand on one foot at a time, and be certain that the shoe is at least one-quarter-inch longer than your longest toe, and that your toes do not touch the upper. Remember that certain shoe styles aren't right for you, any more than certain styles of suits or dresses are."

"And oh — please avoid clogs. I don't care how fashionable they may appear, they make your foot inflexible. You lose tactile sensation. You may as well be walking on stilts."

Summer is both the most healthy and the most tricky season for the human foot.

The tendency is to wear lighter shoes (great), but there is also more danger of picking up infections, fungus, calluses and corns (rotten).

"In summer, because feet swell in heat and humidity, friction and irritation with shoes causes calluses and corns to thrive. And fungus conditions, or even virus infections like plantar's warts, which are usually benign tumors in the bottom of the foot, thrive as well."

To avoid these problems, give your feet the air. Go barefoot as often as possible. "Barefootedness is terrific, but stay on grassy areas or sand," suggests Dr. Roberts.

And watch out for bees. It isn't easy to have healthy feet. Between nature and the shoe industry, there are more ways than one to get stung.

Governor Gets Custody Measure

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Senators have completed passage of a proposal which discourages estranged parents from abducting the children of their broken marriages in a bid to win court custody in other states.

The action Thursday, on the bill by Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, enters Ohio into a uniform custody compact with 11 other states. An additional 12 states have the law under consideration.

Because current laws vary among states, a parent deprived of custody in Ohio may go "shopping for favorable jurisdictions" in other states, supporters of the bill said.

The bill goes to the governor.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A new drug for the lowering of cholesterol in the blood has been approved by the United States Food and Drug Administration.

Colestipol hydrochloride has been tried in a major study on more than 2,500 patients. Cholesterol blood levels fell on an average of 15 to 20 per cent in those patients who were taking the drug and were on a fixed diet.

The new drug is tasteless and odorless and very few side effects have been noted.

The drug can be taken in water, fruit juices, carbonated drinks or milk. And it may even be added to cereals.

It is anticipated that the drug, under the trade name of "Colestid," will be available for general use shortly.

Cholesterol is still considered a major risk factor in heart disease.

A "blood-washing" machine is being used successfully to reduce the risk of hepatitis after blood transfusion.

The machine, built by the International Business Machines Corporation, is being used by a number of blood banks all over the country.

The proposed ban on saccharin has been considered a hardship for diabetic patients. It is for this reason that there seems to be some easing of the restrictive use of saccharin for such people.

Specialists in diabetes and the American Diabetes Association believe that young diabetics are particularly affected by the proposed ban. Some alteration in the ruling that limits saccharin will undoubtedly be made so that there will not be unreasonable deprivation for those who require a sugar substitute.

More and more drugs are coming on the horizon to benefit those afflicted with rheumatoid arthritis. Although there is no one drug that can be singled out as being best for all patients, persistent trials with various drugs seem to bring some relief for many patients.

There are about 15 new drugs that have been shown to have beneficial effects. Propionic acid and its derivatives have created interest by specialists in rheumatology.

These new drugs are being carefully evaluated in order to find the ones most helpful for chronic rheumatoid arthritis.

Mandated Policy Benefit Passed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Insurance companies in Ohio would have to make available to all policyholders family health plans that include coverage for infants from "the moment of birth," under legislation approved 92-0 Thursday by the House.

Sponsoring Rep. Eugene Branstool, D-1 Utica, said a 1974 law required companies to offer the plan to new subscribers, but was found not to require that it be made available to policyholders who renew their coverage.

Branstool's bill now goes to the Senate.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A new drug for the lowering of cholesterol in the blood has been approved by the United States Food and Drug Administration.

Colestipol hydrochloride has been tried in a major study on more than 2,500 patients. Cholesterol blood levels fell on an average of 15 to 20 per cent in those patients who were taking the drug and were on a fixed diet.

The new drug is tasteless and odorless and very few side effects have been noted.

The drug can be taken in water, fruit juices, carbonated drinks or milk. And it may even be added to cereals.

It is anticipated that the drug, under the trade name of "Colestid," will be available for general use shortly.

Cholesterol is still considered a major risk factor in heart disease.

A "blood-washing" machine is being used successfully to reduce the risk of hepatitis after blood transfusion.

The machine, built by the International Business Machines Corporation, is being used by a number of blood banks all over the country.

The proposed ban on saccharin has been considered a hardship for diabetic patients. It is for this reason that there seems to be some easing of the restrictive use of saccharin for such people.

Specialists in diabetes and the American Diabetes Association believe that young diabetics are particularly affected by the proposed ban. Some alteration in the ruling that limits saccharin will undoubtedly be made so that there will not be unreasonable deprivation for those who require a sugar substitute.

More and more drugs are coming on the horizon to benefit those afflicted with rheumatoid arthritis. Although there is no one drug that can be singled out as being best for all patients, persistent trials with various drugs seem to bring some relief for many patients.

There are about 15 new drugs that have been shown to have beneficial effects. Propionic acid and its derivatives have created interest by specialists in rheumatology.

These new drugs are being carefully evaluated in order to find the ones most helpful for chronic rheumatoid arthritis.

Mandated Policy

Benefit Passed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Insurance companies in Ohio would have to make available to all policyholders family health plans that include coverage for infants from "the moment of birth," under legislation approved 92-0 Thursday by the House.

Sponsoring Rep. Eugene Branstool, D-1 Utica, said a 1974 law required companies to offer the plan to new subscribers, but was found not to require that it be made available to policyholders who renew their coverage.

Branstool's bill now goes to the Senate.

Rescues Help Make Summer Safe

By TOM SPRING
Herald Staff Writer

You are speed boating and a friend falls overboard. You are fishing from a canoe and the boat capsizes. Two of you try to ford a creek on a fallen log and one slips. What do you do?

Should a friend or member of your family be involved in a water mishap this summer, there are many things that both the nonswimmer and swimmer can do to help.

The four basic procedures in water rescue are reach, throw, row, and go, according to David Shank, Water Safety Director for the Pickaway Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The first thing to do is to reach the victim if possible. This can be done by extending an arm, leg, shirt, towel, pole or a tree branch while maintaining a firm position on the ground or stable object.

If the victim is out of reach, the rescuer can throw a buoyant object such as a life ring, water cooler or chest, a mounted tire from a car, a beach ball or anything else that will float and will sustain weight, Shank said.

When a reaching rescue is not possible, the nonswimmer or swimmer can reach the victim by boat, rowboat, canoe or motorboat.

Only when these three procedures are impractical should a person attempt to swim to the victim and return him to shore. Shank said, "If you are not trained in lifesaving, don't swim after someone."

Only those trained in lifesaving should attempt a swimming rescue. "It is less tragic for one person than for two to drown," he said.

Shank said, "A swamped boat will float. Stay with it until help arrives.

People of all ages who would like training in lifesaving techniques may call the Red Cross at 474-5736 for information about classes. These classes are provided free by the Red Cross which is supported by the Community Fund.

Any person with senior or advanced lifesaving certificate who would like to receive training as a water safety instructor in a locally-taught course this summer should contact the Red Cross office.

Swimming lessons at all levels are being given throughout the summer by the Red Cross at Ted Lewis Park.

Beginner courses will be given at Deer Creek State Park July 5 - 15 at 9:30 a.m. and 10:15 a.m.

People who would like to attend lessons at Gold Cliff Park may contact Dwight Briner, water safety instructor.

Senior Citizens Travel To Stephen Foster Home

Recently, 34 Pickaway County Senior Citizens traveled to Bardstown, Kentucky to see the Stephen Foster Story. Enroute they had lunch in Lexington and afterwards a local guide showed them many historical and interesting sights in Lexington and surrounding community. They traveled through the Blue Grass country and visited the horse farms and race track.

They arrived in Bardstown in the evening in time for a rest and a delicious dinner at the Holiday Inn. They spent a comfortable night at the Holiday Inn after they attended the theater. The Stephen Foster Story is an outdoor musical drama performed in My Old Kentucky Home State Park, but on this evening there was persistent rainfall which prevented having the drama outside.

It was moved to the nearby armory. "My Old Kentucky Home, Good Night" included Foster's Plantation Melodies as sung by Christy's Minstrels, and written and composed by Stephen C. Foster. The cast was composed of many talented people who had performed in many leading roles in operas and other musicals in United States and abroad.

After having an early breakfast the next morning they visited the Old Kentucky Home of Judge Rowan, who was the uncle of Stephen Foster. This is the home in which Stephen Foster spent so many happy days. It is still furnished with paintings and furniture of that period. The gift shoppe close by carried a variety of choice items and was interesting to browse through. Departing Bardstown the group traveled to Pleasant Hill and toured the Shaker Village where all buildings had been restored. They lunched at the Trustees House. The food was delicious but cooked the ways of the Shakers of years ago.

After lunch they were homeward bound to Circleville with only rest stops on the way. Everyone commented on their delightful and interesting tour and would like the same tour in the future.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

He's A Lover, Not A Husband

DEAR ABBY: At the age of 44, I'm stumped. All my life I've worked with the public and thought I had seen and heard everything, but my own situation has me completely baffled.

After 12 years as a divorcee, I remarried. My problem is sex. When I dated my husband our sex was great, but as soon as we got married it started to go downhill, until now it is nothing. Six months of nothing, and I am ready to climb the walls.

I love my husband, Abby, and he claims he loves me. What is wrong? I am his fourth wife. His three previous wives told me that sex with him was wonderful-until they got married! They all admitted that they had cheated on him. (One he caught in bed.)

I don't want this to happen to us. Or me. When I mention seeing a doctor he flares up and throws a tantrum like a kid.

He is 50, drives a truck and looks like a stud, but since our marriage he has been a dud. Help me.

"ME" IN N.J.

DEAR "ME": It's psychological. Some men are turned on only by illicit sex. But as soon as it becomes legal (and therefore no longer forbidden), it loses all its excitement and appeal. In extreme cases, they are unable to perform.

Psychotherapy could help. If your husband refuses, you have no choice but to climb the walls until you reach the top-and then go over to join his three former wives.

teach my children, ages 4 and 6, NEVER to accept any kind of gifts from a stranger.

My problem is that many times when we are on a bus, or shopping in some public place, some well-meaning person will admire my children and offer them candy, gum and even money!

I hate to hurt their feelings, but, Abby, it makes it so hard for mothers to train children NOT to accept anything from strangers when strangers keep offering them goodies and money.

Can you please say something to help our cause?

ONE MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'll try. Perhaps it hasn't occurred to all you generous, well-meaning people who "love children" and can't resist offering them goodies or money, that this is the technique used by child molesters who hope to gain a child's confidence in order to get him to "go for a ride" or "not tell" after improper advances have been made.

So if you love children, please don't offer them candy, money or gifts of any kind.

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls I work with is constantly talking about her sex life with her husband. (She's not a young kid, either.) Some of us are bored and others are embarrassed by her daily morning report of what went on in her bedroom, but no one has the nerve to tell her.

We know she reads your column, so if you can't think of a better solution, how about running this letter?

THE OFFICE GANG

DEAR GANG: If no one has the courage to speak up, you all deserve to be bored or embarrassed. I'll run your letter, not as a "solution" to your problem, but as a reminder that the meek are destined to put up with a lot.

The best investment in your life.

Bring Problem Bugs To Agronomy Day

If you have some mysterious bugs chomping on your soybeans or some new weeds choking out your corn, bring samples of the pests with you to Agronomy Day on July 7. Agronomists and entomologists will be on hand to identify your problem and attempt to arrive at a solution.

Registration for the field day begins at 9:30 a.m. at the Agronomy Research Unit of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center southeast of Wooster on US 250. Tours of the corn, soybean, and wheat breeding plots are on the agenda. In addition, the latest research data on minimum tillage systems, pasture renovation, double cropping, and soil fertility will be of special interest.

Information and publications will be available and cover topics on weed control and identification, drying systems, plant analysis and soil testing, use of a computer to make crop management decisions, and the use of field scouts in pest management.

Visitors will also have the opportunity to tour the new Research and Extension Analytical Laboratory (REAL) on the OARDC campus. The REAL Lab combines the services of the Ohio Testing Lab and the Ohio Plant Analysis Laboratory.

Tickets for a noon lunch will be available during registration. In the event of rain, an indoor program at the OARDC Fisher Auditorium will be set up. Agronomy Day is just one of a number of field days held annually at OARDC to get new research information out to the farmer. The event will be held in cooperation with the Ohio Cooperative Extension Service and The Ohio State University.

If you would like to go with the county group, contact the County Extension Office. We will be leaving at about 7:30 a.m. that morning.

Laundry Plan Wins Approval

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Nonprofit organizations that provide laundry and other services to hospitals would be exempt from Ohio's sales tax under a bill approved by the House.

Rep. Robert E. Netzel, R-81 Laura, said the bill would nullify a tax department ruling holding that although hospitals are exempt when they perform the work themselves, service groups created to serve more than one hospital are not.

Netzel suggested his bill, which now goes to the Senate, would change a situation in which hospitals seeking to hold the line on health care costs are being penalized.

LEGAL NOTICE

Pursuant to Ordinance No. 25-77 sealed bids will be received by the Director of Public Safety of the City of Circleville, Ohio, at the Office of the Mayor, until 12:00 Noon, July 22nd, 1977, for furnishing a Police Package Automobile Cruiser for the Police Department of the City of Circleville, Ohio according to the plans and specifications on file in said Safety Director's Office. Each bid must contain the full name of every person or company interested in the same, and be accompanied by a Certified Check in the sum of $200.00, as a Guaranty that if the bid is accepted, a contract will be entered into and it's performance properly secured. 4-H Members Attend Animal Science Camp At Wilmington

NEW KIND OF CAMP — Mike Wolford, Mike Morton and Jeff Johnson attended a new Animal Science Camp at Wilmington College.

Jeff Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Johnson, 26408 S.R. 207, New Holland; Mike Morton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton, 8294 Trimmer Road, Stoutsville; and Mike Wolford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wolford, 23807 Ringgold Southern Road, Stoutsville, recently returned from a new, exciting and educational adventure in 4-H camping. The Washington C. H. and Eaton Area Extension Centers, a part of The Ohio State University and the Ohio Cooperative Extension Service, hosted a 3-day 4-H Animal Science Camp at Wilmington College in Wilmington, Ohio.

Significant financial support for the activity was provided by Landmark, Inc., Feed Division, Columbus, Ohio; and Bill Butler, The Union Stock Yards Company, Hillsboro, Ohio. Other supporters for the program included Schearbrok Land and Livestock Company, Clayton, Ohio; Armstrong Farm Products, Inc., Seaman; Bob Evans Farms, Columbus; Helfrich Super Market, Inc., Washington C. H.; Laurel Oaks Vocational School; Wilmington College and Southern State College. Thirty-two coeducational 4-H'ers from eleven Southwestern Ohio counties participated in the highly technical 3-day event.

The teens were able to observe both beef and hog carcasses on the rail. Dr. Bobby VanStavern of The Ohio State University cut both beef and hog carcasses, showing the various top retail cuts and methods of using the total carcass at the retail level.

Bring Problem Bugs To Agronomy Day

If you have some mysterious bugs chomping on your soybeans or some new weeds choking out your corn, bring samples of the pests with you to Agronomy Day on July 7. Agronomists and entomologists will be on hand to identify your problem and attempt to arrive at a solution.

Registration for the field day begins at 9:30 a.m. at the Agronomy Research Unit of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center southeast of Wooster on US 250. Tours of the corn, soybean, and wheat breeding plots are on the agenda. In addition, the latest research data on minimum tillage systems, pasture renovation, double cropping, and soil fertility will be of special interest.

Information and publications will be available and cover topics on weed control and identification, drying systems, plant analysis and soil testing, use of a computer to make crop management decisions, and the use of field scouts in pest management.

Visitors will also have the opportunity to tour the new Research and Extension Analytical Laboratory (REAL) on the OARDC campus. The REAL Lab combines the services of the Ohio Testing Lab and the Ohio Plant Analysis Laboratory.

Tickets for a noon lunch will be available during registration. In the event of rain, an indoor program at the OARDC Fisher Auditorium will be set up. Agronomy Day is just one of a number of field days held annually at OARDC to get new research information out to the farmer. The event will be held in cooperation with the Ohio Cooperative Extension Service and The Ohio State University.

If you would like to go with the county group, contact the County Extension Office. We will be leaving at about 7:30 a.m. that morning.

Laundry Plan Wins Approval

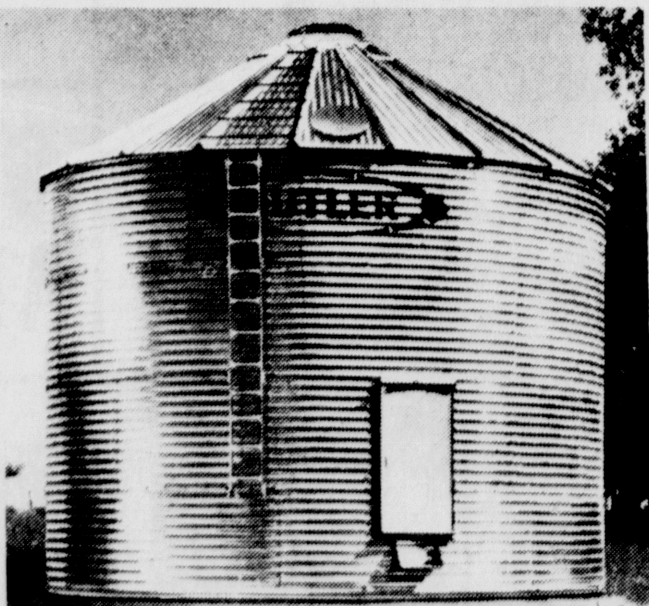

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Nonprofit organizations that provide laundry and other services to hospitals would be exempt from Ohio's sales tax under a bill approved by the House.

Rep. Robert E. Netzel, R-81 Laura, said the bill would nullify a tax department ruling holding that although hospitals are exempt when they perform the work themselves, service groups created to serve more than one hospital are not.

Netzel suggested his bill, which now goes to the Senate, would change a situation in which hospitals seeking to hold the line on health care costs are being penalized.

News For Homemakers

County Extension Agent,

With the click of an "on" switch, the world as pictured by television enters your home. People often find it a soothing pacifier and an unfailing companion.

Parent's concern over TV is usually over the possible effects it might have on their children. Seldom do they raise the question, "What is TV doing to our entire family? How does it effect how all ages within the family think, feel and act towards each other?"

Average hourly TV use is hard to estimate. The season of the year; the schedules, events and problems of individuals in the family; and each person's interests cause definite differences. In a group of 100 families, mothers reported that their preschoolers watched from 5 to 88 hours per week. Keeping in mind these wide variations, the average of TV watching for an American family is generally reported as six to seven hours a day.

One research study showed the relationship between the number of hours of TV watching and the level of family tension. It concluded that the amount of time of TV use was the best predictor of the amount of tension present in the family. The greater amount of time spent in watching tied directly to greater family tension.

Parents don't need to be told that when family members use the TV set there can be problems. You are quite aware that TV raises the noise level and the distractions in the home. You know about the disputes over program choices, volume, or working of the controls that may occur. You are familiar with the competition between TV and such activities as visiting, reading, homework, talking on the phone, sleeping or writing letters.

But, have you considered how TV is used by your family to avoid interacting with each other? Television is not the only way to escape from the family and personal problems, yet it may be one of the more attractive choices. It may also be the most available.

Research has resulted in somewhat contradictory conclusions. From the positive view, using TV to escape can help in these ways:

1. It helps keep those who are angered or aggressive from having to interact with others;

2. Children who have experienced strict discipline from their parents may choose to watch TV to avoid opportunities for run-ins with their parents.

3. Less talking due to TV watching may reduce temper outbursts, moodiness, faultfinding, or unhappiness and the resulting hurt or angry feelings among family members;

4. Family violence may be reduced.

5. It may provide the time "away" for getting an improved view of a problem and how to handle it.

On the negative side, using TV to escape may mean:

1. A family has only an appearance of family togetherness.

2. Family members share less time in talking, doing other things together, and getting to know and help each other.

3. Family problems are not recognized, understood, and solved.

4. Problems grow worse and tension rises.

Using television to escape is not all bad. It only becomes harmful to the family when it happens often and prevents the solving of problems. As neglected problems grow worse, tension among family members may increase.

It is striking that the concern about television has so narrowly focused on TV's effects upon children. As far back as 1948, TV was described as "practically a member of the family."

You and-or your children might ask: Is TV causing family tensions? Is it reducing them? Is it hiding them? What causes the differences from one time to another in how it effects your family?

What effect would less TV watching have on the family? Would it uncover hidden problems? Would it open up new chances for sharing of family fun and work projects? Would it cause more fighting between family members?

Talking about television as a family may be the best way to find out what TV is doing in your home. If a change in TV habits is desired, it can best be done when everyone understands why a change is needed and agrees on how and when the TV is to be used.

It's The Time Of Year For Bagworms

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

The bagworm is one of the more curious and interesting insect pests of trees and shrubs. It's carrot-shaped bag is constructed of bits of material from the plant upon which it is feeding and is enlarged as the bagworm grows. The bag is dragged around wherever the worm goes. When disturbed, the bagworm merely pulls its head back into its bag and is protected.

BAGWORMS

Damage to plants is caused by the larva eating plant foliage. The larva, as it grows, has a big appetite and can cause severe defoliation of the plant on which it is feeding. In the case of evergreens, the eaten area does not fill back in with foliage. Therefore, there is a void of foliage and this alters the shape and beauty of the plant. The plant often needs to be replaced. Once a plant is infested—and no control measures employed—bagworms may reappear year after year. If season conditions are ideal for the development of this pest, a tremendous population could appear, feed, and perhaps kill the plant.

The bagworm is especially fond of junipers, cedars, arborvitae, and white pine but it also is found feeding on a number of shade trees and shrubs. Their favorite plants are usually learned quickly as one can see the tell-

The bagworm spends the winter as an egg inside the female bag. Several hundred eggs may be laid in a bag. Since some bags are males, not all bags examined will contain eggs. The eggs hatch in late May in southern Ohio and the first half of June in the northern part of the state. Upon hatching, the young larvae crawl out of the bottom of the bag and start to feed and construct silken shelters over their bodies. As the larvae feed and grow, they continue to enlarge the exterior of their bags with pieces of foliage, bits of bark, or other plant parts. Feeding and growth usually continue until August at which time the larvae are full grown and the bags are about 2½ inches long. At this time they stop feeding and loop strands of silk around a twig and become firmly attached.

After the top of the bag is closed, the larvae reverse their position in the bags so that their heads are facing downward. They then change to the pupal (resting) stage. The male moths emerge about 4 weeks after larval feeding has ceased. They fly around and find a female bag with a female in it and mate. The female then deposits a mass of eggs inside the bag. She then wriggles out of the bag and falls to the ground and dies. The eggs remain in the bag during the winter. There is only one generation of bagworms each year.

One of the best ways to control bagworms is to hand pick them in the fall, winter, or before the eggs hatch in the spring. A thorough job must be done because if one female bag is missed, this can be the source of a new infestation. On large trees, hand-picking may be dangerous and impractical.

A number of natural enemies feed on the larvae and eggs and apparently this explains why populations of bagworms fluctuate from year to year. One can see the various parasites and predators of this insect by collecting dozens of the bags in the winter and placing them in a fine screen cage. Observe the cage frequently during April and May as the natural enemies should emerge and be seen flying around in the cage.

The important thing about controlling bagworms with a chemical is that it should be applied when the bagworms are small. The larger the worms, the more difficult they are to kill. Several insecticides can be used for chemical control. Contact the County Extension Office, 137 W. Franklin Street, Circleville, for more information about which ones to use.

Toledo Tops Tides Twice

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Charlie Spikes led Toledo to a pair of victories over Tidewater while Columbus knocked off Charleston twice in another International League baseball doubleheader Friday night.

In other action, Rochester nipped Richmond 7-6 and Pawtucket dumped Syracuse 9-3.

Spikes led Toledo to an 8-2 victory in the first game and a close 6-5 triumph in the nightcap as he hit a two-run homer in the first game and helped rally the Mud Hens from a 5-0 deficit in the second.

His homer, again with one on, began the second-game rally. Toledo added three runs when the Tides walked a man with the bases loaded, followed by a two-run single by Gary Woods. The winning run came in the seventh with one out, when Orlando Gonzalez knocked a man in with a double.

Toledo also had a two-run homer from Joe Lis in the first game.

Dennis Kinney, 4-3, and Cardell Camper, 7-4, got the victories, while Mardie Cornejo, 4-3, and Paul Siebert, 0-2, were the losers.

Columbus nipped Charleston 7-6 in 10 innings and then won again 4-2.

Shortstop Gary Hargis had four hits and four runs batted in for Columbus in the first game.

He was also selected to play on the U. S. Golf team against Japanese collegiates later this year.

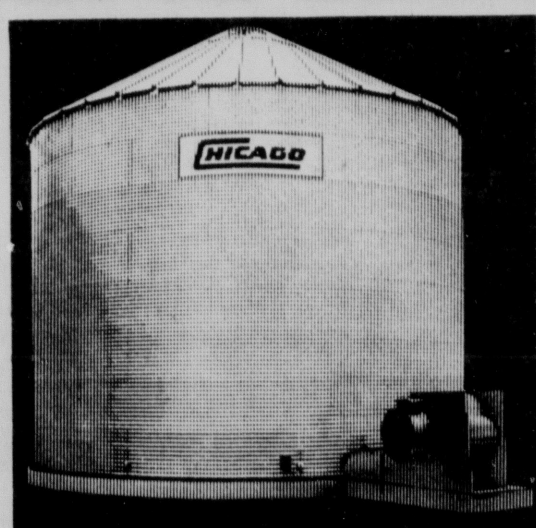

Couples Club Results Are Announced
